DANGEROUS CURVES BEHIND

By Mack Sennett.

Nell Purdy, the clerk in her father's grocery store, gives Bertie Badger, the town slicker, the air and falls in love with Bob Jones, a stranger from the City. He tells her his father is going to put a railroad through the town so she gets her father to sink his money in real estate. Badger spreads the news that Jones is a fakir and all the town people chase him and Nell over the countryside, vowing to lynch him. However, a railroad construction gang knock down a fence showing them the line already nearly completed, so all ends well.
